

Quick Facts

- Provides full-text articles from leading U.S. newswires
- Extends the coverage of America's News or Access World News
- Can be searched individually or together with other NewsBank resources
- Offers authoritative, award-winning reporting on local, national and international news
- Together with America's News or Access World News, provides unprecedented depth of coverage on a wide range of topics, issues, people and events

Extend the coverage of your news collection

Access U.S. Newswires is a full-text collection of current and archived articles from key domestic newswires. With this specialized resource, libraries can expand the coverage of their NewsBank collection, offering unprecedented depth and breadth for research on many different topics.

Wide-ranging coverage

Newswires often cover news that local papers do not, providing authoritative, award-winning reporting on local, national and international people, issues and events. Access U.S. Newswires includes content from such leading newswires as the Associated Press, Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service, Scripps Howard News Services, McClatchy-Tribune Wire Service, Copley News Service, PR Newswire and Financialwire.

Additional sources for more successful research

Access U.S. Newswires supplements the local reporting found in America's News and Access World News. It shares the same user-friendly interface as these collections and can be cross-searched with them. Together, these resources provide comprehensive coverage of past and current news, enabling patrons to more thoroughly explore timelines and compile and compare information from a variety of sources.

About NewsBank resources

Updated daily, America's News provides current and archived full-text news articles from the complete electronic editions of more than 1,500 news sources. With the addition of hundreds of international news sources from six continents, libraries can upgrade to Access World News, which consolidates more than 3,500 news sources into a single, fully searchable database.

For more information, contact a NewsBank representative by calling 800.762.8182 or emailing sales@newsbank.com.